

NORTH & SOUTH

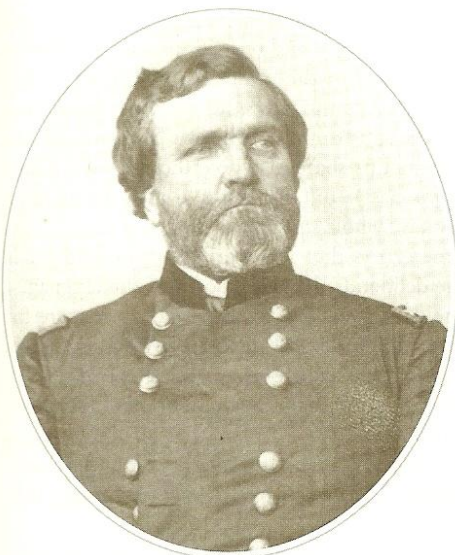

FEATURES

The Tredegar ironworks: was Richmond the key?
("A Strategic Alternative?" page 14)

General Alexander Hays
("Tactics in the Wilderness," page 22)

General George H. Thomas
("Snake Creek Gap and the Campaign that Never Happened," page 56)

14 A STRATEGIC ALTERNATIVE?

Was there an alternative strategy open to Civil War armies—one that would have brought a speedier end to the conflict and cost far fewer casualties?

—Allen Guelzo, James McPherson, Keith Poulter, Steven Newton, Steven Woodworth

22 TACTICS IN THE WILDERNESS

Meade, Hancock, and Hays—Lifting the "fog of war."

—Reid Ross

44 MISSOURIANS AND THE WAR ON THE WESTERN RIVERS

Missourians played a critical role in events that made the Union's riverine victory possible.

—William Piston and Thomas Sweeney

56 SNAKE CREEK GAP AND THE CAMPAIGN THAT NEVER HAPPENED

The campaign as envisaged by General George H. Thomas would have been very different.

—Steven Newton

68 THE SAVAGE WAR

The irregular war that gripped much of the Southern and border states was far more significant than historians have hitherto believed.

—Daniel Sutherland

DEPARTMENTS

- | | |
|---------------------------|-----------------|
| 4 Editorial | 43 Do You Know? |
| 5 Crossfire | 55 Back Issues |
| 8 Knapsack | 61 Cover Story |
| 43 Civil War round Tables | |